THE ASK

Before the treatment, before the boards: the questions we needed answered. What the song is. Who is singing it. Where he comes from, what he does when he is not working, and what he thinks life is for. He answered all of it by hand, in one sitting.

THE ANSWERS

We designed them back as plates — torn paper, oil pastel, cut-out type and photographs from the shoot, in the same visual language as the cover art — so the answers could go out on their own as rollout.

THE READ

Every answer here is also a production decision. The hoverboard, the two rooms, the loop at the end: all of it is downstream of this document.

BEFORE THE TREATMENT

Seven answers, transcribed as they were written and designed as seven plates.

We sent InKreece a questionnaire before we wrote anything. Not a brand deck, not a mood board — the questions we actually needed answered before the treatment could be honest: what the song is about, who is singing it, where he comes from, what he does when he is not working, and what he thinks life is for.

He answered in his own words, at speed, without a publicist in the room. We then designed the answers back as plates — torn paper, oil pastel, cut-out type, stills from the shoot — and sent them out ahead of the video. The audience met the artist before they met the single.

The plates are reproduced on the pages that follow, one per page, unedited.

WHAT WE LEARNED

Four answers that became four decisions in the film.

TWO WORLDS — PLATE 05

“A scientist… busy experimenting on a secret discovery, and still makes time for the girls that he loves.” That is the structure of the video: a man at his work and a man in a room with a girl, cut against each other until they are the same shot.

THE HOVERBOARD — PLATE 06

“Skating is one of my favorite hobbies.” One line, one artefact. The board he rides across the desert is drawn from that answer, and it follows him into the live-action room.

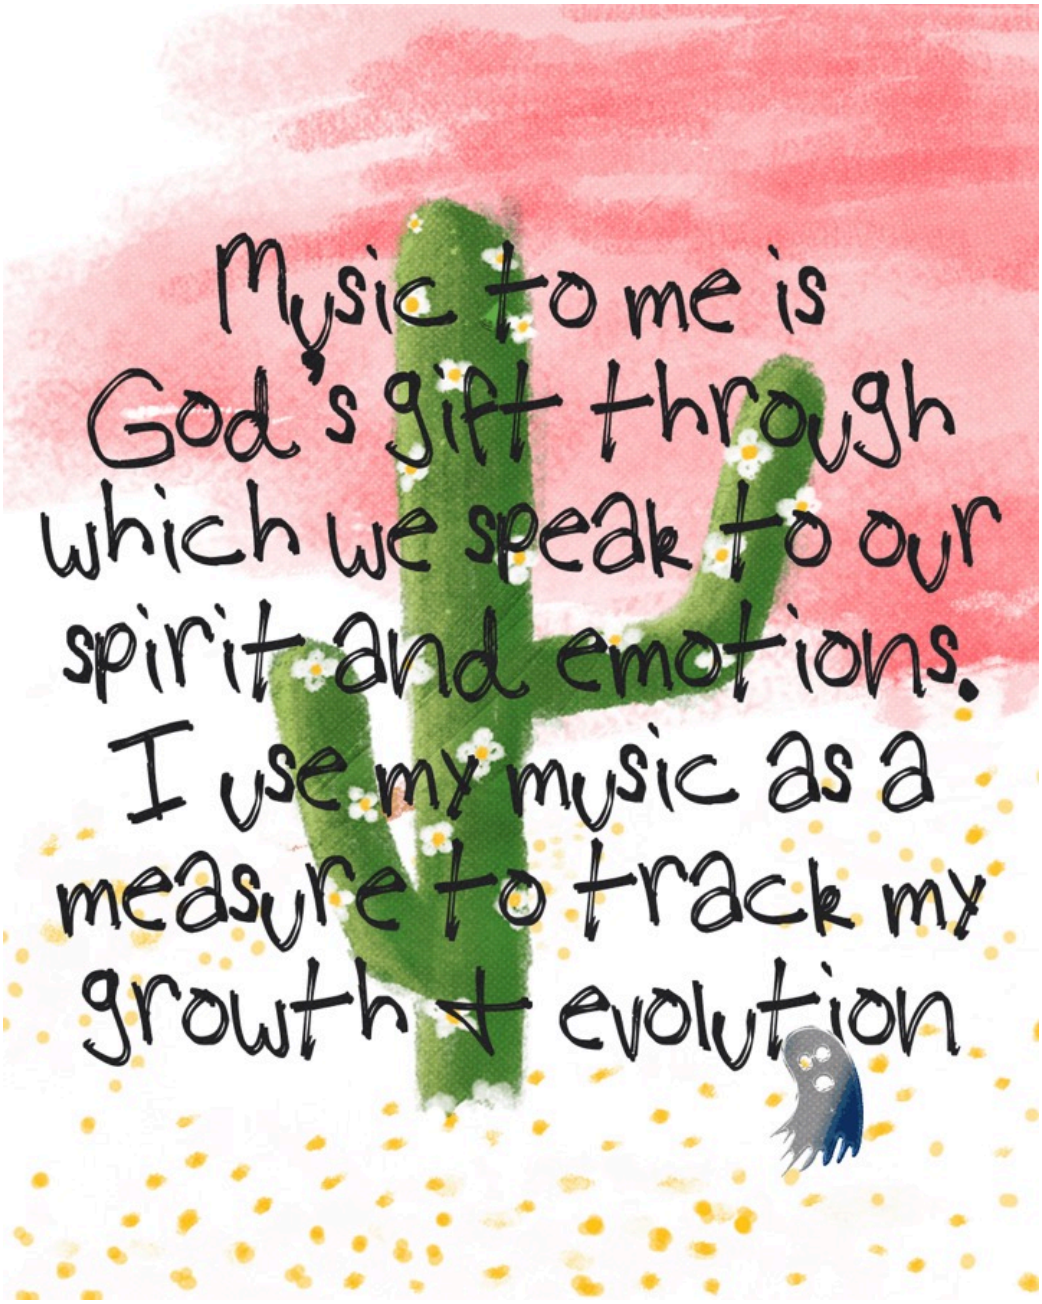

THE WARMTH — PLATES 03 & 04

“Onyeoma is a genuine love song.” “I always try to evoke a deep sense of love in my music.” No irony, no distance. The chorus stays slow and intimate, and plate 03 is cut into the film as the transition into it.

THE LOOP — PLATE 07

“My favorite thing about life is TIME.” The video ends on the frame it opened with. Time restarts, and the film runs again.

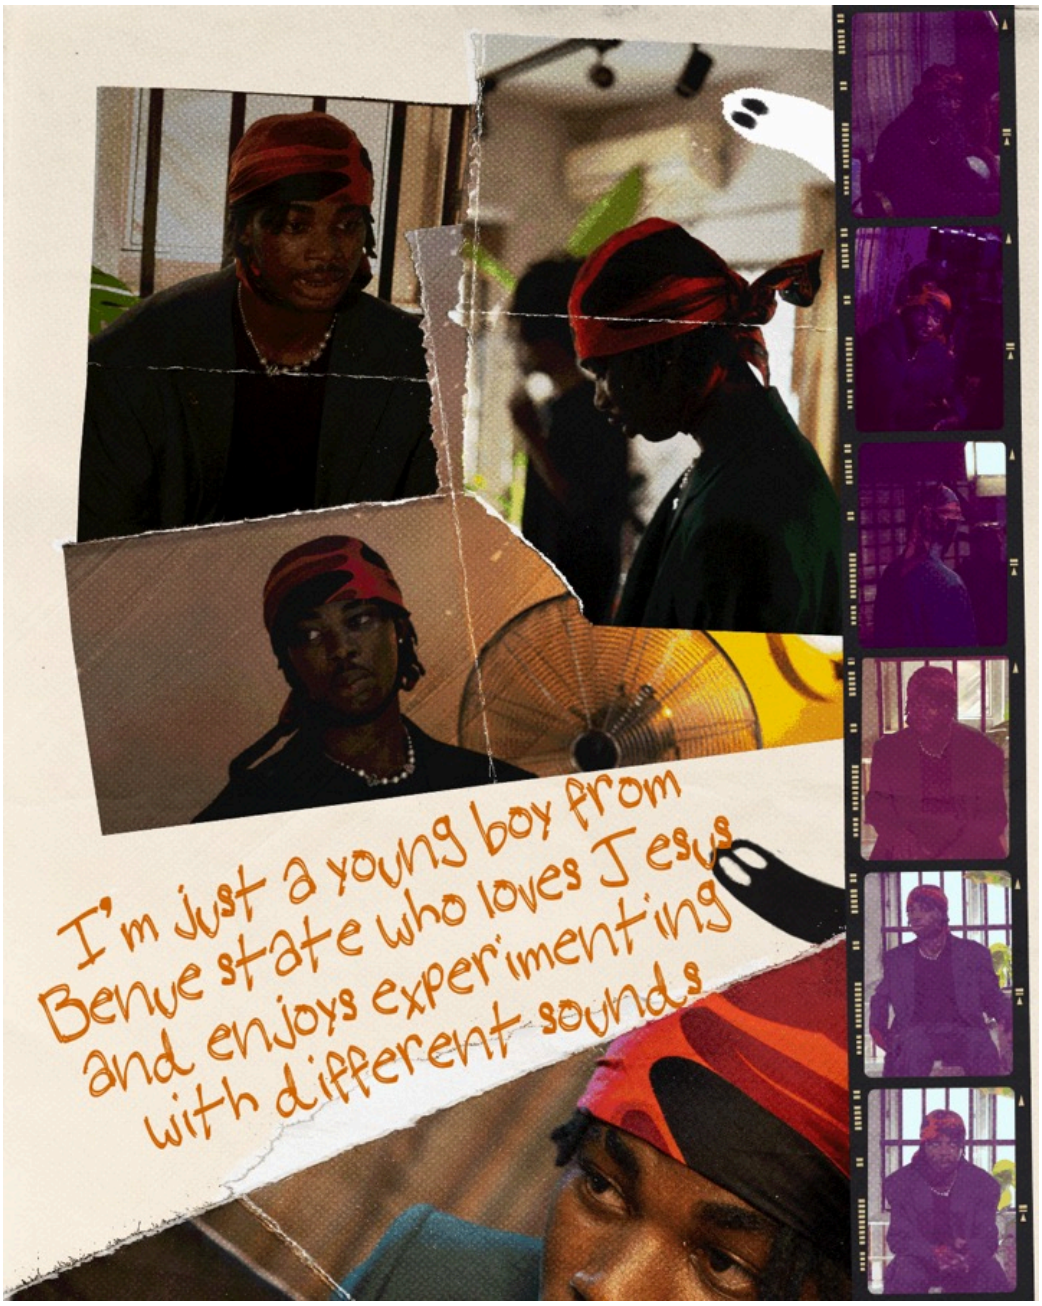

THE QUESTIONNAIRE — PLATE 01 01 / 07

MUSIC

"Music to me is God's gift through which we speak to our spirit and emotions. I use my music as a measure to track my growth & evolution"
The first plate of the rollout: painted sky, a flowering cactus, and the ghost already in the corner.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE — PLATE 02 02 / 07

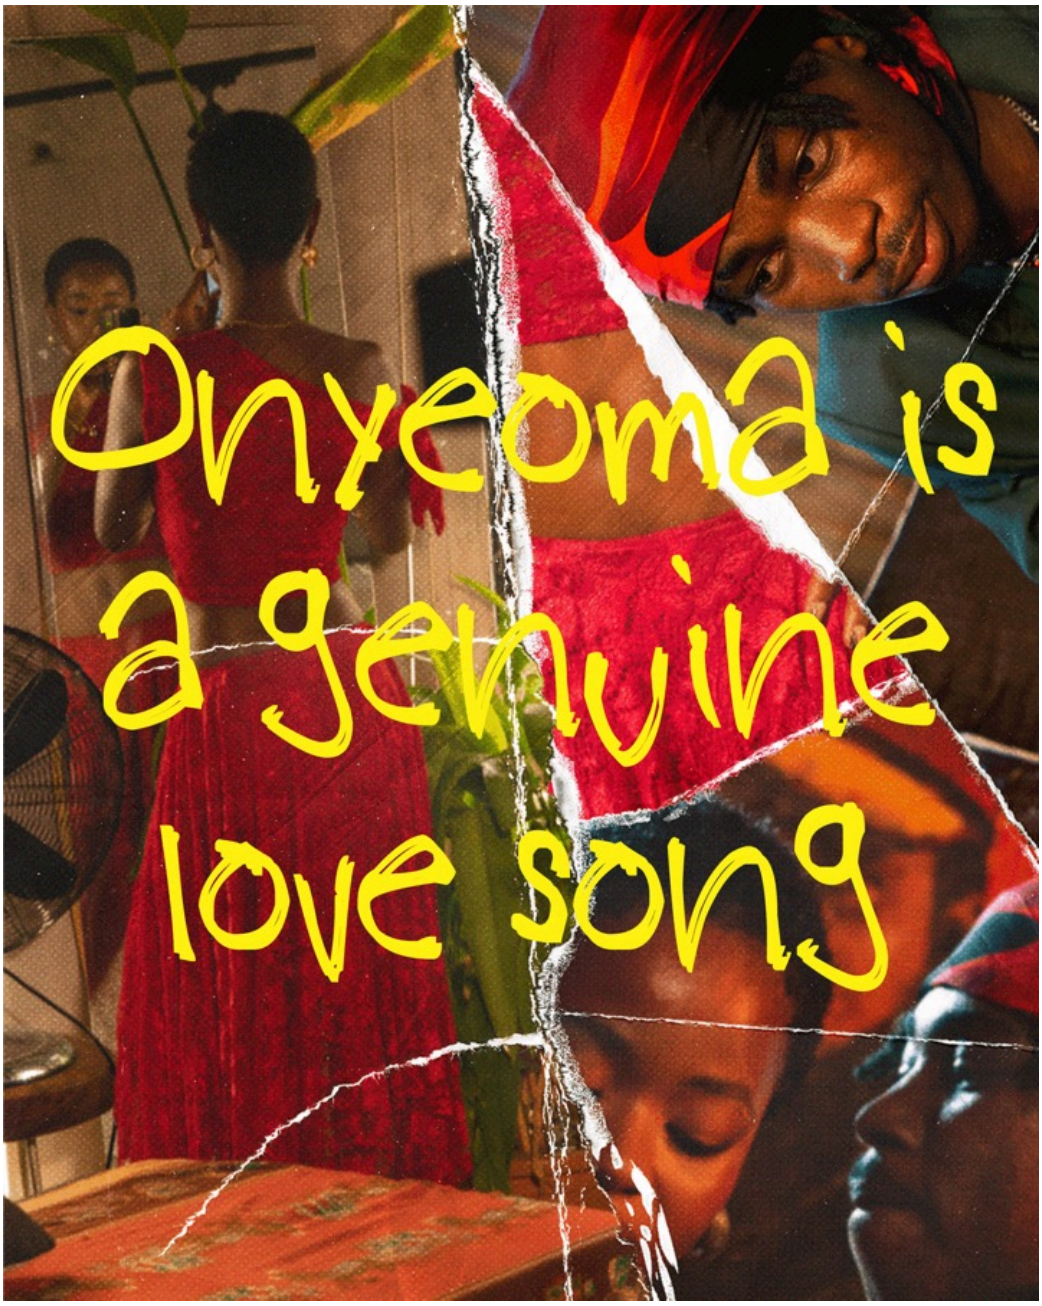

BENUE

"I'm just a young boy from Benue state who loves Jesus and enjoys experimenting with different sounds."

Torn stills from the shoot and a strip of the same frame repeated — the collage the room was later dressed to match.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE — PLATE 03 03 / 07

THE SONG

"Onyeoma is a genuine love song"

Used in the cut: the plate covers the whole frame as the chorus comes in.

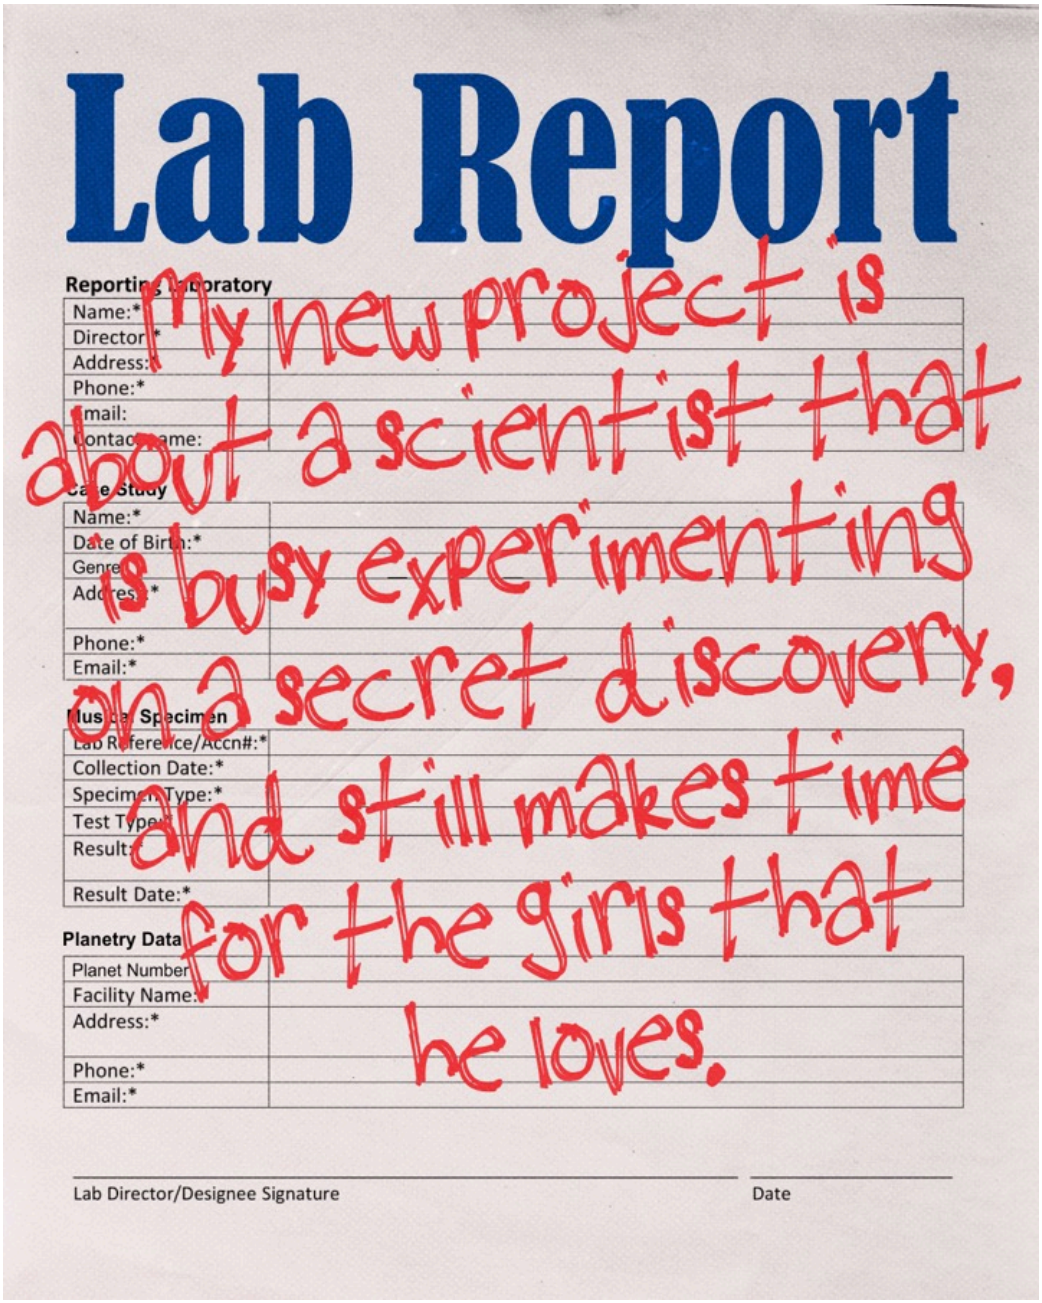

THE QUESTIONNAIRE — PLATE 04 04 / 07

THE INTENTION

"I always try to evoke a deep sense of love in my music"
Yellow marker over a photo collage: the desert behind him, the set in front. Nothing here is decorative.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE — PLATE 05 05 / 07

THE PROJECT

"My new project is about a scientist that is busy experimenting on a secret discovery, and still makes time for the girls that he loves."
Set on a lab report form. The form is the joke, and the brief for the whole video.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE — PLATE 06 06 / 07

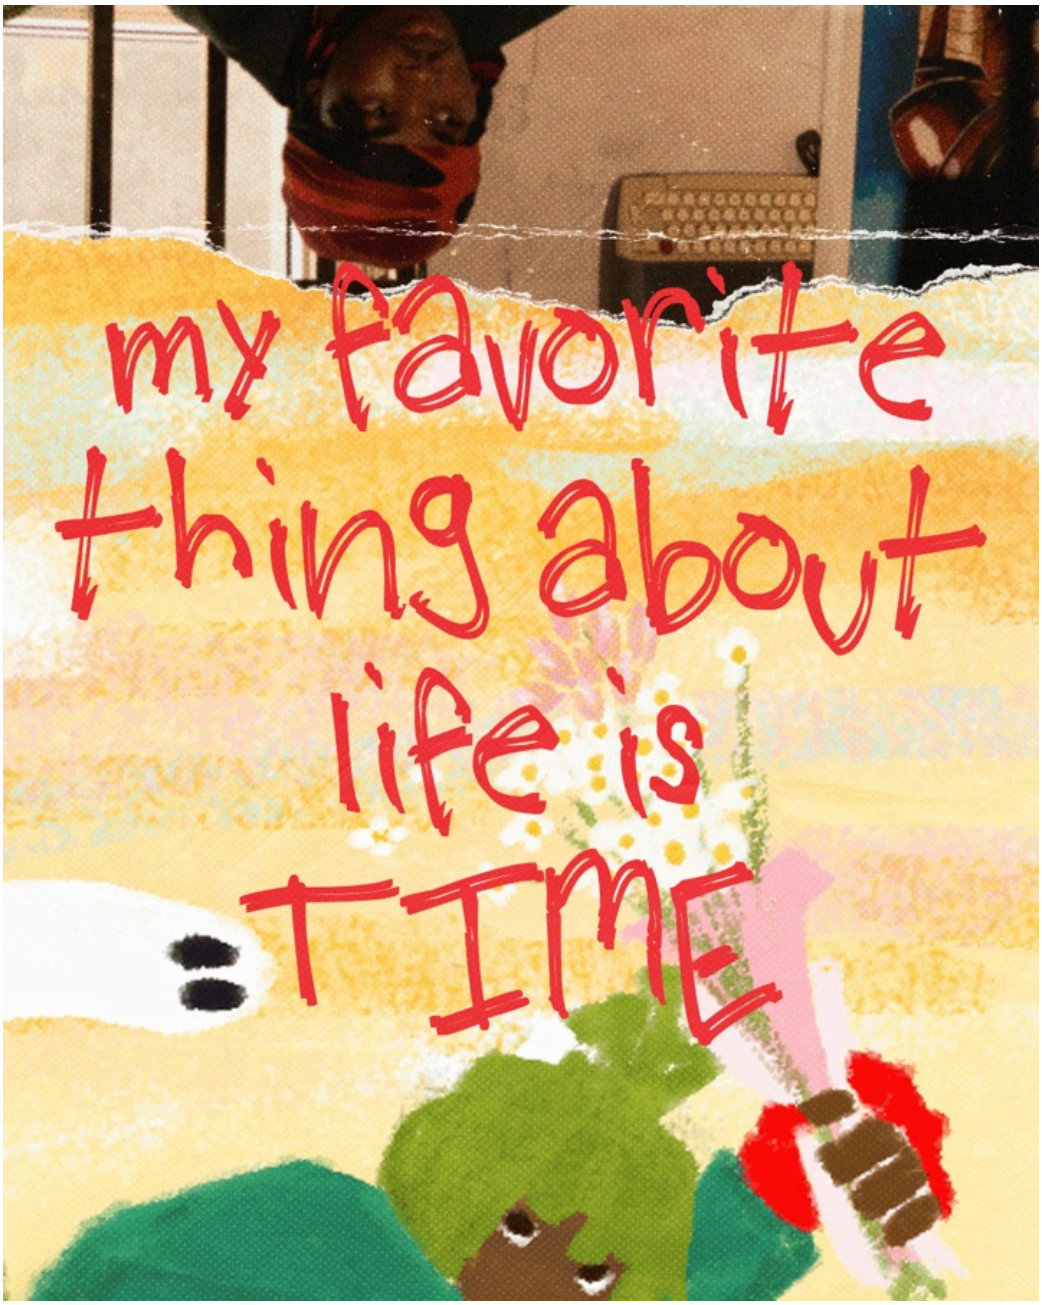

THE HOBBY

"Skating is one of my favorite hobbies"

The board was drawn from this page: deck, flame, silhouette. It is the only object that exists in both worlds.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE — PLATE 07 07 / 07

TIME

"my favorite thing about life is TIME"

The last plate, and the film's last idea: the video ends on the frame it opened with, so time starts again.
